

PRINTED LABELS

We produce both plain and printed labels, available across both paper and synthetic materials.

With our plain labels, we have multiple printing methods and finishes to suit your requirements. Each offering different levels of protection, from uncoated or a simple matt or gloss varnish, up to a laminate to really protect your labels from the elements, knocks and even chemical contact.

Flood Coat

Flood coat labels are a simple way of making a label stand out. These are single colour labels that can be used for safety or awareness precautions, or used in a warehouse environment, to differentiate one item from another, at a glance. To make them really stand out, we have fluorescent options available.

Header and Footer

These are an effective way of being able to produce labels with your company logos and details, but keeping space for you to incorporate any variable information you would want to print yourselves. We use these ourselves for our box-end labels, so that you can see what is in your box, without the need for opening them up.

Full Colour

With full colour labels, the range of possibilities and applications are endless. We can produce anything from a single dot, up to a photo quality finish.

We provide a free PDF proof before going to print, and will only proceed once you have given us your approval.

Special Finishes and Tactile Labels

As well as our printed labels, we offer a wide variety of special finishes to make your labels really stand out from the crowd.

We offer dual-height varnishes, to give that 3D effect and great feel to the labels.

By using these in combination with matt and gloss varnishes, you can get some really premium looking and feeling labels.

Hot-foiling is another way for you labels to stand out. Using brightly coloured foils, we can create an almost mirrored look in a wide variety of colours.

Whilst print is a good way to create a really well-designed label, it could also be used for security, or to add another element of flair. By using UV detectible varnished, we can supply you with a label design that only you know is there. This can be fantastic from a security point-of-view as it allows you to verify the validity of an item. They are fully customised to your design, and can be produced as a continuous piece, or just in a discrete section within the label, to your design.

We offer free samples of materials, as well as previously produced labels and examples of any of the above print methods.
