

Benefits of outsourcing your electronics manufacturing

Electronics assembly sub-contracting plays a hugely important role in modern manufacturing, often companies need to engage an electronics manufacturer because they have a requirement to produce electronics but not the in-house capability to do so and the cost to set up and establish these means far outweigh the requirement.

This approach is becoming very common and as such it is the job of the sub-contractor to show why they are the right choice for an OEM. Here at SIC we aim to do this through one simple tenet that has served us extremely well since our inception in 1964 and that is manufacturing excellence.

Manufacturing Excellence is not just a strap line to our company, it underpins everything we do throughout our business. From experienced, knowledgeable technical sales people and engineers, robust, quality accredited manufacturing procedures and 100% testing to stock control systems to help your manufacturing processes with on time delivery.

The key elements to this are;

Quality

As manufacturing becomes more specialised it is important to gain and maintain the relevant certification and accreditation. SIC base our business around quality and our manufacturing is backed up by ISO9001, ISO14001, TS16949 and AS9100 compliance and UL, NICEIC and IPC accreditation.

Knowledge and Experience

As a business we have 49 years' experience of the design, manufacture and supply of cable assemblies and wiring harnesses. This knowledge is reflected throughout our in house engineering team who work with our customers to optimise the materials and manufacturing processes for their design to ensure that the parts are manufactured to the highest quality in the quickest time.

Stock Management

We recognise that we are part of our customers overall manufacturing process and to complement this we have a range of options for delivery that our customers can choose from. Whether it be direct line feed, KanBan, Just In Time or consignment stock holding we tailor our delivery method to meet our customers' needs.

This approach gives our customer a set of tangible business benefits that, in our experience, turns transactional business into long term relationships that allow us to better serve our customers every step of the way.

