What Do I Receive On Completing Forklift Training?

On completing your accredited training, you will receive a certificate. We generate ITSSAR and AITT certificates within our CRM. These also include accompanying ID cards which are included in the quoted fee.

RTITB produce their own certificates. ID cards are also available for RTITB course but are not included in the quoted cost of the training.

How Do I Check My Training Is Accredited?

All our forklift training courses are registered with the accrediting body. Each accrediting body we work with provides a unique ID number with its certification. ITSSAR use a TOPS number, AITT has an ACORNS number, and RTITB uses a NORS number. You can use these numbers to check with the respective accreditor that your training is accredited.

Do I Need a Forklift License?

Although the ID cards accompanying training certificates are often mistaken for a license, no actual license is required to operate a forklift. On completing the operator course, you will receive a certificate of basic training. This is the legal document.
