It's been a busy and successful time for local Limerick business Cranage Veritas. Despite the challenges of Covid-19, this week the company is celebrating the success of their Managing Director, Jon Jones, who has been approved as a Factory Follow-Up Inspector. The appointment comes after he completed a successful training session with Eurofins E&E North America (Eurofins MET Labs), who are based in Baltimore, utilising remote working technology, which has kept the company thriving in these unprecedented times.

Cranage Veritas is now in a unique position to offer an authorised Follow-Up Factory Inspector, meaning Irish manufacturers will have a single point of contact for the NRTL and accredited testing service. It also means that Cranage Veritas have been able to add North America and Canadian certifications to the list of their fully supported client services. Plus, with their MD as the only Local Technical Representative listed in Ireland, it means they are conveniently able to perform tests on-site at manufacturer's facilities to produce the necessary reports for NRTL certifications.

Cranage Veritas Managing Director, Jon Jones, said:

"I'm proud to have been approved as a Factory Inspector with Eurofins MET Labs, and am looking forward to strengthening our working relationship with them. It's a significant development for us at Cranage Veritas as we enhance our local NRTL business; this is an essential service for customers looking to gain NRTL Certification, and I'm delighted I can now evaluate factory processes as part of this. I'm eager to build relationships with factories in Ireland and develop strong working connections."

This means that Cranage Veritas, operating out of Roselawn House in Limerick's National Technology Park, can now offer this key new NRTL service, which they believe will be an unrivalled benefit to Irish manufacturers. With this announcement Cranage Veritas are confident they can provide the necessary support needed to ensure that Irish electronic and medical products meet the regulatory requirements for the targeted countries, and continue to comply with the countries directives, rules and import laws.
