

Baby it's cold outside.

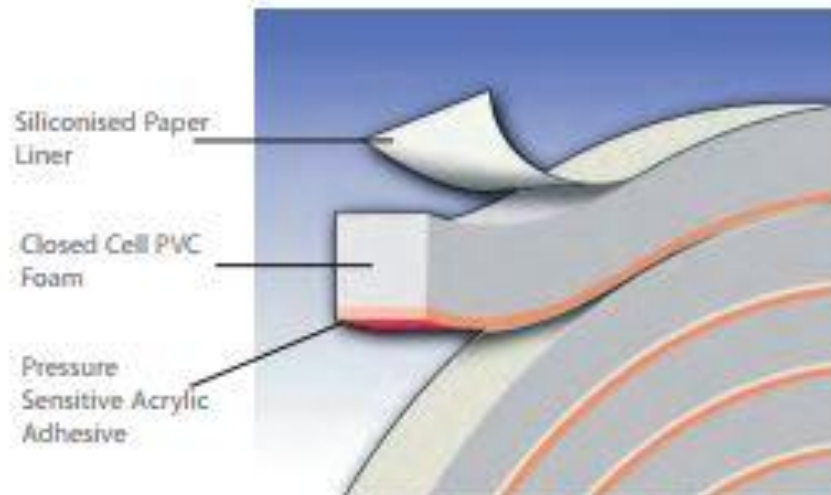

Just like that, Christmas has come and gone, as has new year and we find ourselves moving full steam ahead into 2018 already. Despite this, we still have a couple of months to go until we can fully say goodbye to Winter and welcome Spring. In these cold times keeping warm at home is essential. One of the biggest reasons for heat loss in the home are the front and back doors. To check if your doors are well insulated, stand outside when it's dark and shine a torch around the edges of the door. If light can be seen seeping in, then we'd suggest foam draught excluders to prevent the bitter cold getting through. We have been supplying foam to the building and construction industry for years which has earned us an exceptional reputation for keeping buildings warm.

Warm Home, Cool Bills

- Warm your home, cool your bills More than 40% of all the heat lost in an average home is through the loft space and walls
- 270-300mm (10.5inches)s of loft insulation can save up to 15% of a home's heating costs
- Up to 20% heat loss is through doors and windows
- Up to 20% of all heat loss in the home is through ventilation and draught

Featured Product

ZouchSeal 90 is a semi open cell PVC foam with a very low density and a low force to compress. The special design of this tape allows a quick application without problems. ZouchSeal 90 is designed to create a watertight seal with a minimal amount of force. This ability allows it to conform easily to rough or irregular surfaces. It is also ideal for sealing thin gauge metals or plastics which could deform easily under greater pressures. To create an adequate seal, the foam must be compressed a minimum of 30% in the final joint. Once in place, the foam will be able to handle normal joint movement due to thermal expansion or environmental forces. The ZOUCHseal product line is predominantly used for doors, walls and windows as an air, dust or draught seal.
